Design evangelist (part-time)
Illustration • Infographics • UI-design • Service design

audriga is an award-winning pioneer in data portability and cloud-based data migration services.

Our customers are large telcos and ISPs, hosting companies, and private customers from all over the world.

At audriga, we believe in the power of modularity and in good design. We seek inspiration for our work from architecture and design theory.

We're searching for a team member combining classical design skills with interest and ability to engage in interdisciplinary discourse for the benefit of our customers and products.

We seek support for various design tasks, cooperation with our freelance graphic designer and for service and (software) product design. You should ideally have basic knowledge about the IT/hosting business, good organizational skills, and communication skills to work with a geeky team.

This part-time position is eligible for design students advanced in their studies. If you earned a degree already, we may also be able to shape a full-time position suitable to your profile.

For more information and other job offers see www.audriga.com/jobs